OUTLINES.

Rioting continues in the Korean capital following the abdication of the Emperor; a mob attacked the premier's palace yesterday and committed other depredations in the streets; Japanese troops are on the scene and martial law prevails——William J. Bryan yesterday issued a statement as to the railroad situation in the country, stating that the time is not ripe for government ownership but that the lines should be controlled; he touches on State legislation and refers to the attitude of the two great parties to the problem——As the result of a head-on collision between a freight and an excursion train to Detroit yesterday thirty-odd people were killed outright and seventy were injured, some of them seriously; the party was principally composed of railroad people on their way to Detroit for a Saturday afternoon holiday——Judge Pritchard at Asheville yesterday heard the petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of the Southern ticket agents sentenced by the police justice to terms on the roads, reserving his decision until Monday; both Governor Glenn and President Finley of the Southern Railway issued statements on the situation yesterday; there were no developments in Raleigh——Two of the participants in the Greek rioting in Roanoke, Va., last week were sentenced to pay fines and to jail in the police court of that city yesterday; other cases will be dealt with in the higher court——The second of the defendants in the Anson lynching cases was arraigned at Monroe yesterday; the witness who turned State's evidence against his fellows is weakening and the chances are stronger in the second than in the first for the establishment of an alibi ——New York markets: Money on call nominal; time loans dull and easier; sixty days 4 1-4, ninety days 5; six months, 5 3-4; spot cotton quiet, closing at 12.95; flour easier and lower to sell; wheat easy, No. 2 red, 95 7-8 elevator; corn easier, No. 2, 60 elevator; oats dull, mixed, 49 1-2; turpentine easy 59 to 59 1-2; rosin steady, strained common to good $4.50 to 4.60.

The Maxton Scottish Chief has a "colored department," but it is not a "yellow" sheet.

Scientists are worried over the proposition, "What shall we eat?" But what's getting us is that we don't know what we are eating.

It was a good thing for somebody that Judge Pritchard didn't burn his bridges behind him when he left Asheville for Raleigh.

In the Anson lynching case, concluded at Monroe Friday, the jury seems to have considered some of the State's witnesses worse than the man on trial.

"Talk is cheap," is it? Ask the auditors of the State and of the railroad companies what they think of it after they have seen the bills of the lawyers in the rate cases.

The Nebraska Supreme Court has decided that the wife is boss of the house. Nothing new about that. It has been the lex non scripta since the garden of Eden was chartered.

It is hoped that poor old Bob Fitzsimmons has received his last knockout—in other words, that he will never enter the prize ring again. The ring of the anvil would suit him better.

A man who declares that he is the Devil has been hanging around Oyster Bay to see President Roosevelt. However, the President would rather have him to deal with than to be pestered with any Shedevil.

What will the Charleston News and Courier do, now that its chiefest of "favorite sons," Bull Raymond, has incontinently fled the diamond? Yes, "Bull" has departed and great is the lamentation in Charleston. Meanwhile, Jacksonville looks on with fiendish glee.

Some time since The Star suggested Judge George Gray, of Delaware, for first place, and Governor John A. Johnson, of Minnesota, for second place on the Democratic ticket for 1908. And now comes Col. Henry Watterson and names Governor Johnson for the head of the ticket. Nevertheless, while it expects to support the nominees of the National Convention, The Star stands by its original suggestion of Gray and Johnson.

The Charleston News and Courier keeps up with all matters pertaining to the Mecklenburg Declaration, the birthplace of Andrew Jackson, and other North Carolina historical events; but it has overlooked the fact that our last Legislature passed a bill and made an appropriation for the establishment of a hospital for the treatment of tuberculosis. This is why it is calling on Georgia to "assume the leadership in this movement."

The first turn on the diamond was between the Giants and the Rattlers, the latter having taken the game in a score of eight to one. The game on the part of the Giants was little less than a comedy of errors, neither team having made more than one or two safe hits in the game.

The Monarchs were unable to break the hold of the Y. M. C. A., on the top rung of the percentage ladder and the Association team remains the undisputed champion of the League. The game was called at 5 o'clock and those who were present witnessed a splendid exhibition of the sport. The score was four to one and both teams, the leaders in the League, were in the game from start to finish.

The attendance yesterday afternoon was an as good as it has been this season and both games were featured by the rooting from the grand stand and bleachers. The teams have some enthusiastic supporters and those who are playing in hard luck for the present, predict better things later in the season.

A Game at Delgado.

The "Brooklyn Bullies" played a fine game with the team from Delago Cotton Mills at Delgado yesterday afternoon, the score having been 11 to 1 in favor of the Wilmington team. Houston and West composed the battery for the Bullies and Riggins and Wood for Delgado. The pitching of Houston was the feature. He struck out 16 men.

Assistant Chief W. P. Monroe, of the Fire Department, has been appointed commissary sergeant of the Second Regiment of the North Carolina National Guard, for the annual encampment next month. He succeeds Mr. Eugene Forshee, who recenly removed to Jacksonville, Fla. Capt. Monroe's appointment is eminently fitting. He will reflect credit upon himself and upon his command.

ANSON LYNCHING CASE

Second of Defendants Placed on Trial Yesterday—State's evidence Witness is Weakening—Jurors Not to Attend Church.

(By Associated Press.)

Charlotte, N. C., July 20.—Zeke Lewis, one of the score of residents of Anson charged with the lynching of John V. Johnson, May 28th, 1906, was placed on trial in Union county court this morning. The jury was secured in an hour and the same witnesses who testified for the State in the Jones case went on the stand today to give evidence against Lewis.

Sheriff Bogan swore today that Lewis was one of the ring leaders of the mob, and one of those who seized him and took the keys to the jail.

H. D. Kendall, Sr., the lyncher who turned State's evidence, gave testimony that differed considerably from that given in the Jones trial. He was not so positive in his identification of those whom he saw in the mob, and his mind seems to have weakened under the strain of the former trial. The cross-examination of Kendall completed, the court took a recess until Monday.

At adjournment Judge Peebles ordered that the jury not be allowed to attend religious services tomorrow, for fear that they might hear a sermon on lynching. The defense claims that it has a stronger alibi for Lewis than was established in the Jones.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LECTURE.

Mrs. Sue Harper Mims, Widow of Distinguished Atlantian, Coming.

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, of this city, accounts itself exceedingly fortunate in the engagement of Mrs. Sue Harper Mims, C. S. D., of Atlanta, to deliver a lecture in Wilmington on Monday evening, July 29th, on the subject of Christian Science. The subject of Mrs. Mim's address has not yet been announced neither has the place of the lecture been decided upon, but further notice as to these details of Mrs. Mim's visit will be made known in the public prints later. The lecture will be without charge and the public is most cordially invited.

Mrs. Mims is the widow of the late Mayor Livingston Mims, of Atlanta, and belongs to an old and distinguished family of Scotch ancestry. She has been a conspicious figure in Southern life and has always stood for idealism and has attracted to her home the most eminent, distinguished and brilliant people of the South. She is a frequent contributor to the press on ethical and literary topics. About twenty years ago she was healed of chronic invalidism of many years standing, through Christian Science and leaving the old routine she has consecrated her life to the service, becoming a student and a devoted follower of Mrs. Eddy. It is certain that she will be heard here with much pleasure.

A SURPRISE MARRIAGE.

Miss Frankie Powers Fennell Bride of Mr. Godbold Last Night.

A marriage that will come with much surprise and pleasure to a large number of friends in this city and elsewhere was that of Miss Frankie Powers Fennell, the attractive daughter of Mr. J. N. Fennell, of this city, and Mr. Harrison Vann Godbold, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., but now of this city and holding a responsible position with the wholesale grocery house of Mr. J. Allen Taylor. The marriage of the young people was announced to take place later but an element of romance seized them yesterday and with a few friends last evening they repaired to the manse of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church where they were made man and wife in a pretty ceremany in the presence of the friends, Rev. A. D. McClure, D. D., officiating. After the marriage they left for Wrightsville Beach where they are spending their honeymoon at the Hotel Tarrymoore.

CRIMINAL COURT MONDAY.

Solicitor Duffy Arrived in City Yesterday—Two Weeks Term.

Solicitor Duffy arrived in the city yesterday from his home in Onslow and was engaged in the afternoon preparing his docket for the two weeks term of New Hanover Superior Court for the trial of criminal cases which will begin tomorrow morning, Judge J. Crawford Biggs, of Durham, presiding. As stated yesterday there are something over eighty cases on the docket, several of them capital offenses. The case of young Lonnie Snipes may or may not be tried at this term. He is still in the hospital recovering from the effects of an operation for appendicitis, but his counsel yesterday afternoon said that so far as they know now they will be ready for trial at this term. Judge Biggs is expected in the city today or tomorrow.

Lieut. Orrell Appointed.

Major W. F. Robertson, commanding the W. L. I., upon advices from Col. H. C. Bragaw, of the Second Regiment, has appointed Lieut. Thos. R. Orrell to be in charge of the representatives of the regiment at the National shoot at Camp Perry. The men are designated from each company and they report at the encampments being later assigned to the team, upon their record at target practice.

STILL IN A FERMENT

Judge Pritchard Gives Habeas Corpus Hearing in Railway Case at Asheville.

SITUATION IS INTERESTING

Statement From Governor Glenn; Another by President Finley—No Special Developments at Raleigh—Other Notes.

(By Associated Press.)

Asheville, N. C., July 20.—Argument in the habeas corpus proceedings brought by Messrs. J. H. Wood and O. C. Wilson, in the United States Circuit Court here to secure their release from the sentence imposed on them Thursday by the city police court for violating, as agents of the Southern, the State rate law, was closed this afternoon and Judge Pritchard announced that as he wished to accompany his decision with a written statement, he would adjourn court until Monday.

The entire day was taken up with argument by counsel for the petitioners and State, General Counsel Thom, of the Southern, appearing for the former and Judge J. H. Merrimon, of this city, for the latter.

Judge Merrimon contended that no court had ever paralyzed other courts by preventing them from proceeding in criminal cases by suspending a statute, and he further contended that court could not hold that the State Legislature could fix rates, and could not provide punishment for failure to observe such rates.

Mr. Thom argued that the penal section of the rate law was unconstitutional, both on its face and was so proven by evidence because it allowed such extraordinary fines that through fear of them, the railroad would be deprived of the inalienable right to resist the law in the courts, and that as the court had taken jurisdiction of the rate law in the case decided here June 29th, it was legally bound to protect that jurisdiction, since otherwise it would be a nullity.

From President Finley.

Asheville, N. C., July 20.—President Finley, of the Southern Railway, today gave out a formal statement bearing upon the railroad cases now before Judge Pritchard. Mr. Finley, after explaining the character of the cases, declared such have from time to time been filed in a large number of States, and have heretofore progressed in an orderly way to final determination. He reiterates how the public is protected by the railroad's giving coupons to purchasers of tickets covering the difference between the old and new passenger rate fixed by the Legislature and the statement is made that the whole case can be disposed in a few months. He further says:

"It would seem to be perfectly plain that if an individual or corporation believed itself to be in danger of deprivation of its property by legislation, it should be allowed the privilege of having validity of the legislation determined in an orderly method. If ours is to be a government of law and not of man, then surely no litigant should be deprived of a fair opportunity of going into the courts to protect his rights. The Southern Railway Company is bound to protect its property, not only in the interest of its owners and creditors, but also in the interest of the whole public. It has a right and duty to appeal to the law for its protection. It is not in the fight or to interest of the people of North Carolina that the ability of the transportation companes to perform the public service and to enlarge and increase the means of serving passengers and shippers, shall be destroyed or diminished.

"It is a contradiction in terms to say of any person or corporation that filing a suit in court and asking for an orderly and judicial determination of the very right of any matter, is itself a violation or defiance of law. If an appeal to a court of justice is a violation of law, then all our courts should come to an end."

"The Half Has Never Been Told."

(Special Star Telegram.)

Raleigh, N. C., July 20.—Governor Glenn, in a statement tonight as to his attitude in the prosecution against the Southern Railway Company, declared that the thirty thousand dollars fine imposed yesterday is only the beginning unless the company changes it course. Future executive action depends on the course taken by the Southern and the Atlantic Coast Line. The Governor says:

"If they will acquiesce in the law like other roads have done, then no further indictments will be made. But if they persist in selling tickets at a higher rate than 2 1-4 cens, I will instruct the State's attorneys to aid solicitors in sending new bills and prosecuting these railroad companies until they obey the law, or the courts of highest jurisdiction declare the rate act unconstitutional. I regret this conflict; want it settled. If the railroads withdraw their attempted injunction until the evidence is taken and the court passes on the constitutionality of the act, in the meantime selling tickets at the rate fixed by the statute, I will aid them in hastening the hearing, stopping all indictments and asking all citizens to cease bringing penalty suits. If, however, they refuse to recognize the law, and as a result, fines, costs and odium attach to them, and their agents, who persist in obeying them in defiance of law, and go to jail, they will have no one but themselves to blame, as the State is ready to stop when law is obeyed.

"I am not guilty of usurpation, as some railroad organs contend, in thus trying to enforce the violated law, but am simply as an executive officer, executing the law as the State constitution requires me. My duty is to see that all persons violating the law are prosecuted. I am actually in a great many cases, as in these, marked prosecutor. So, whether it be in prosecuting alleged lynchers, as I am now doing in Union county, or trying to stop the railroads from setting at naught the declared will of the people through its Legislature, I intend, without needlessly harrassing individuals or railroads, to try to enforce the laws now being persistently and defiantly violated by these railroads."

No Developments Yesterday.

Raleigh, N. C., July 20.—There were no developments here today in the case of the Southern Railway Company, in which the $30,000 fine was imposed yesterday evening by Judge Long for violation of the State rate act. The expectation is that there will ere long be a writ from Judge Pritchard of the Federal court to stay the execution of the sentence and collection of the fine. General Counsel Thom, F. H. Busbee and others of counsel for the Southern, left last night on a special train for Asheville and are today taking a hand, both in the sensational proceedings there and presumably preparing for whatever steps are to be taken in the Wake case.

Agent Green said today that he has not yet been assigned to other work on the Southern, but this will be done in due course, and he says the Southern is taking care of him in a very satisfactory maner.

THRONGS AT THE BEACH

Past Week a Record Breaker at Carolina's Favorite Resort—Concerts at Lumina Today—Doings at the Seashore Hotel.

The week closed last night breaks another record in the crowds at Wrightsville Beach. All the hotels and cottages are practically filled and the transient guests from the city and nearby towns are numerous. All trains yesterday brought large crowds on the week-end rates and Wrightsville is now more than "a shadow of its former self." Last night the crowds at Lumina and at the hotels were possibly the largest of the season.

Two fine concerts will be given at Lumina today, one in the afternoon at 3:45 P. M. and one in the evening at 8 P. M. The concert will be given with the enlarged orchestra, the same as on last Sunday, and as was the case last Sunday the orchestra will be stationed on the ball room floor, so that music can be heard easily from all parts of the pavilion. Both the afternoon and evening concerts were well attended last Sunday, and the Consolidated Company looks for even a larger attendance today. The programmes are given below:

COTTON CROP OUTLOOK.

The New Orleans Picayune, one of the most reliable authorities on cotton in the country, and which, through its correspondents keeps thoroughly abrest of the situation, speaks in a more hopeful strain of the present outlook of the growing crop and expresses sensible and practical views concerning the relative advantages of a full and a short crop.

The Picayune says:

"The cotton crop has now reached a period of the growing season usually considered the most critical in its development. The Agricultural Department's report on the condition of the crop on June 25, issued just a week ago, placed the condition at 72 per cent. as compared with 83.3 per cent. on the corresponding date in the preceding year, and with a ten year average of 83.2. The July report of the Government showed that the crop had improved during the highly favorable month of June less than 2 per cent. It goes without saying that this showing was a surprise to the cotton trade as a greater per cent of improvement had been looked for.

"During the whole of the month of June and during the current month up to the present time the weather has been all that could be wished. It is true that there were some complaints of too much dry weather in Texas, but it is doubtful if the crop suffered materially from drought, whereas the long hot and dry spell was not conducive to the rapid spread of the cotton boll weevil evil. It is unthinkable that the crop has not materially improved under the prevailing conditions, and there is quite a general feeling that the Government report erred on the side of undue conservatism.

"That some of the acreage originally planted in cotton has been abandoned, owing to the poor stands secured, or because the fields had become so overrun with grass that it would not pay to clean them out, there is every reason to believe, although it is probable, that this reduction from the original acreage is not as great as it generally supposed. The present price for cotton is so good that it is but reasonable to expect that farmers will plant all the cotton they can handle.

"There is no denying the fact that the crop is still suffering from the late start and is backward, but it is also true that with a continuance of the present fine weather the lost ground is being steadily regained, making it possible with a late frost to produce a fair yield. Of course, mere speculators desire a short crop, but such a crop would be disastrous to the whole cotton trade because it would have a tendency to demoralize the manufactured goods trade. A short crop is not nessarily a lucrative crop, even though high prices prevail. This is the case because the shortage in the crop is never evenly distributed. In times of scarcity some few farmers make average crops which they are able to sell at the high figures, but the majority have a hard time making ends meet, because they have not produced sufficient cotton to meet requirements even at the highest range of prices.

"The world this year will need a fairly full crop of the fleecy staple if the machinery of the mills is to be kept running at full capacity. All interests would be best served by the production of a full crop, which would not only afford ample work for labor, but would also furnish adequate supplies to the mills, keep the transportation interests active and leave a profit to a much larger number of people than would a small crop, even though selling at fancy prices.

"It is yet too early to make any predictions whatever as to the final outcome of the crop, but the fact cannot be denied that under the stimulus of favorable weather it is making good progress and gradually recovering from the early set backs it suffered."

We are glad to learn through one of our exchanges that Representative Small, of the First District, is following the lead of Representative Richmond P. Hobson, of Alabama, and will establish a school for farmers throughout his district. He will take with him a number of experts on drainage, plant culture, road building, forestry, etc., and will spend a week at each of seven county seats in his district, giving lectures and entertainments for the special benefit of the farmers. This is practical work, that will be watched with interest, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Small's venture will prove as successful as Mr. Hobson's is said to have been.

Vary the routine of daily labor by cultivating a scientific hobby, is the advice of Prof. S. P. Thompson, who reminds us that much of the world's scientific work has been done by amateurs. For instance, William Herschel, the astronomer, was a music teacher; William Gilbert, author of DeMagnete, was a medical man; Dr. W. H. Dallinger, authority on the microscope, was a clergyman, and William Steurgeon, inventor of the electro-magnet, was a shoemaker.

Returns by the London Fire Brigade show that the careless practice of dropping matches and other lights is the most prolific source of conflagrations, more than 21 per cent. of the 3,843 fires which occurred in the county of London last year having been due to this cause. Not less than 257 fires arose from unprotected lights, 148 from oil lamps, 67 from improperly set up stoves, 98 from hot ashes, and 235 from the sparks from grates. Gas leaks and the reckless search for them with lights, resulted in 134 fires. Defective wiring for electric cirtuits led to 100 fires, some of them quiet disastrous, but it is believed that the new regulations and safeguards urged upon architects by electrical engineers will make quite safe such wires as may be placed in future.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—Speaker Cannon was the guest of honor at a millionaires' club in Wisconsin the other day. Somebody asked him to come out and play a game of golf. "What!" exclaimed the Speaker; "I to go wading around out there whacking at a little ball over those duck ponds! Not on your life. I'll stay here, near a mint julep." And stay he did. Speaker Cannon's fearlessness of a mint julep, or a cocktail with a cherry in it, is one of his characteristics that people admire."—Savannah Morning News.

—In his recent speech at Pittsburg, Governor Cummins, of Iowa, said: "It seems to me that we have gone mad in our zeal for the seller and have abandoned the buyer to the tender mercies of monopoly, Combination, and greed." He was talking as a Republican to Republicans. "We" meant the Republican party. "We" the truth and nothing but the truth, yet not the whole truth. His party is standing pat on its ancient infamous policy of protecting the few at the exepnse of the many.—Greensboro Record (Dem).

—The operation of the Texas anti-trust act, which has just gone into effect, will doubtless be watched with interest all over the country, despite the general misgivings expressed as to its efficiency to accomplish the purpose of its enactment. The act provides, in substance, that any person who sells within the confines of the State any article or goods made by a trust or combine shall be deemed guilty of a felony and upon trial and conviction, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiry for a period ranging from two to ten years. Its provisions apply not only to merchants but to all agents and employes of trusts as well. The Attorney-General is reported to have announced that he intends to enforce the law to the letter; but what does the "letter" in this case mean? The law is directed against "trusts or combines," but the definitions of the terms are about as numerous and as varied as are trusts and combines. As a matter of fact, every corporation or association of individuals for a definite business purposes is a "combine" of one sort or another. Whatever other result the law may produce, it is a safe prediction that it will prove a harvest for Texas lawyers.—Norfolk Virginian (Dem).

WILMINGTON DYSPEPTICS.

Sufferers from Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Constriction and Constipation have not only black Fridays but about every day in the seven is of that funeral hue. Consequently they do not enjoy life. They do not laugh very often. They are to be pitied and if possible helped.

The greatest help to them would be a cure. How life puts on a new color scheme to such victims is demonstrated by the use of Dr. Richards Dyspepsia Tablets. Read the following evidence.

Mary Edwards, 614 Harnet street, Wilmington, N. C.

"Since I began taking your tablets my improvement has been such that I feel as though I can claim a complete cure. Previous to taking your remedy I had no ambition for anything. My stomach had bothered me for years, finally getting in such a condition, that it was impossible for me to be able to partake of anything but the lightest of foods and even then it would cause me great distress. I had heard Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets spoken of by a resident of this town and I went to Dr. Green's Drug store and procured a package and have since been taking them regularly. I honestly think them the best tablets for the stomach troubles of all kinds and sincerely recommend their use."

The Making of a Successful Husband

By CASPAR S. YOST.

In Spite of the More or Less Popular Belief That Married Women Work Too Hard, the Fact Remains That There Is No Real Happiness Without Occupation.

[Copyright, 1905, by C. S. Yost.]

MY DEAR JOHN—Your letter reminds me of a German woman who lived in the little town of Missouri where I was raised. She was a cheerful individual of the Mrs. Wiggs type, and she had a laugh that would roll across the village like a peal of spring thunder. Its reverberations were infectious, and, no matter how worn and tired, no matter how troubled, my fellow citizens would be, they would echo a smile, and peace and contentment would settle down upon the whole community. Why, I've seen town meetings of the most violent character turned into love feasts by the influence of that laugh poured through the open windows of the city hall. But that isn't what I wanted to tell you about. Mrs. Schreider believed in the gospel of work. She was never idle. From sunup to sunset and after she was busy. Everything about her little house shone like new silver from the repeated scrubbing and polishing she gave it. She assaulted dirt with the vehemence of an American and the thoroughness of a Teuton. Rest was a luxury she disdained, and yet she was always healthy and always happy.

She assaulted dirt.

"How is it, Mrs. Schreider," she was often asked, "that you are so happy all the time?"

"Ach, Gott!" she would exclaim, with that irresistible laugh. "I haf no time for anyt'ings udder."

Sounds Very Well Indeed.

You say your wife "shall never work if you can help it." That sounds quite heroic and looks very well on paper, but it's ridiculous if you don't mean it and a serious mistake if you do. It isn't original with you. I have heard it a great many times in my life. Some of the men who said it did their best to live up to it, and some of them succeeded, to the sorrow of their wives, but there were several who afterward made their wives work like slaves and occasionally beat them. Between the pampered and miserable doll and the persecuted and equally miserable household slave there is a happy medium, and it isn't hard to find it.

There is an old axiom that "there is no excellence without great labor," and it is equally true that there is no happiness without occupation. Work of some description is as necessary to witl mental as food to our physical well being. We somehow cherish the elusion that well financed idleness is itone acme of earthly bliss, and yet when co e get a two weeks' vacation, no the ier how well filled our pockets, we in in to feel weary of it at the end of e first week and are impatient to get ck into the harness before our time up. Some can stand it longer than de thers, but there are mighty few who h an contentedly do nothing for any ha nsiderable period of time.

C "Oh, but you're talking about men," I hear you say. "Women are different." That's just where you're wrong, my boy. Women in this respect are not different. They must have something to do, and the man who imposes a life of idleness upon his wife, believing he is thereby contributing to her happiness, is making a blunder that he will pay well for in after years. I grant that his intentions are good, but they are of the same character as those used in certain quarters for paving material, and unless the wife is an invalid or is exceptionally constituted his object, prompted by love as it may be, will not be attained, because nature has implanted in every normal human mind a strong and overwhelming desire for action. The world must be kept moving, and it's up to us to turn the crank. The labor of woman is as necessary to progress as is that of man, and it doesn't matter whether it is your wife or my wife or the hodcarrier's wife—each has a definite duty to perform and will find her greatest happiness in its performance.

Now, don't go off half cocked. I don't want to see your wife scrubbing the front steps, although if it is necessary even that probably would do her no harm. I wouldn't have her do anything but that which she is physically able to do and wants to do. Mind what I say now—wants to do. The fact that so many women are useless dolls is mainly due to foolish young husbands like yourself who force their wives to a life of inaction. If given their own way they would choose labor of some character, and 90 per cent of them, impelled by a divinely given instinct, would say housekeeping.

But Not Drudgery.

Among my acquaintances is a young man who has your idea very deeply impressed. When he was married, three or four years ago, he took his beautiful wife to a boarding house and has kept her there ever since. She pleaded for a home, but he would not have her soil her hands. The inactivity of a boarding house was to her unbearable. She has a very fine voice and rare dramatic talent. He reluctantly consented to allow her to give music lessons. Now her income is larger than his own a brilliant future is open to her, and yet she continues to plead for a home, just a little flat where she could do all the work herself, where he and she would be all in all to each other. She just had to do something, but she would infinitely prefer the labors of a home, with its cares and its joys, to the triumphs of her profession.

She has a very fine voice.

The home is the best place for the development and exercise of a woman's talents for numerous reasons, most of which are entirely obvious. Whether it is an original gift to the sex or the result of the training of thousands of years is immaterial. The fact remains that she shines with greatest brilliancy in the domestic atmosphere, and here she should be allowed to sparkle unshadowed. The majority of women realize their duties and responsibilities and desire to fulfill them. They know that they can best be fulfilled in the home, and if let alone they will derive the greatest amount of satisfaction and contentment from the performance of the tasks which home service brings to them.

I don't believe that a woman should be a drudge. I don't believe that she should be required or allowed to do more than she wants to do. When her work ceases to be a pleasure, then it has passed the limit of expediency and defeats its most important object. Where the line should be drawn depends entirely upon her temperament and her physical strength. Some women can do joyfully and with benefit to themselves an amount of labor that would destroy others, and there are some women, like some men, whose excess energy carries them far beyond their physical powers. Too much work is as bad as idleness. There is a golden mean, and instead of trying to prevent Anna May from doing any work at all you should exercise your authority or your influence, whichever you please to call it, to keep her from doing too much. I say this because I've got an idea that she's a hustler, and, while hustlers are admirable people as a rule, they need a little restraint exercised for their own good. However, there are not many women who need a checkrein in the matter of work. They are a good deal like us men in that respect. Most of us believe in temperance when it comes to labor, and some of us are total abstainers. But, whether men or women, we are all better off if we perform a reasonable amount of good, honest work every day, and fortunately the ones of either sex who are content to do nothing are comparatively few.

Some of us are total abstainers.

Idleness a Menace.

Your wife must have something to do, and your silly pride should not stand in the way of the doing. Idleness provides more cases for the divorce courts than any other single agency. It doesn't usually appear in the evidence under that name, but it's responsible just the same. Most frequently it is disguised as incompatibility of temperament, which means that Mrs. Jones has sat in an easy chair and lolled away her happiness. Discontent invariably accompanies inaction, and in its train are the other mental and physical ills which make life unbearable to herself and bring misery to her mate. Yet if that same woman were given something to do, something that she felt compelled to do, either by duty or from the sheer love of it, the mere occupation would remove the shadows from her mind, bring the blood coursing through her veins, redden her cheeks and brighten her eyes, substitute a smile for a frown and give that zest to life and love which is the mainspring of happiness.

You choose a winding road, where curves bring new vistas into view.

No, my boy, let Anna May do whatever she wants to do within the bounds of her capacity. If she takes pleasure in housework, don't hinder her. There is nothing degrading about it. On the contrary, there is no more honorable employment for a wife, and there is none by which she can add so much to the peace and contentment of the home and to the happiness of her husband, her children and herself. Talk as the "advanced woman" may about the enlargement of woman's sphere, she cannot get away from the fact that nature's inexorable laws have given her a field peculiarly her own, a field in which she has no rival, in which she can and does do her greatest work for humanity, and that field is bounded by the four walls of the home. It is true that housework has its cares, its myriad annoyances, that often bring tears of vexation or discouragement, but no method of life has been yet discovered that does not have a few kinks in it, and there never will be. It would be a doggoned monotonous existence anyhow. It's the kinks in life that make existence really worth while, and they are as necessary to the making of a woman's character as of a man's, provided, of course, there are not too many of them. When you start out for a drive you don't care for a straight road unless your only object is the exhilaration of motion. If you want to get the greatest possible enjoyment, you choose a winding road, where curves bring new vistas into view at every turn, and so in life. But, here; if I keep on in this strain I'll be writing poetry in a minute, and of all things on earth deliver me from amateur poetry, particularly when it's maudlin.

Happiest Woman In the World.

As I was saying, the housewife has her troubles, great bunches of 'em, but the woman who pounds a typewriter or who stands up behind a counter and murmurs "Cash!" can never know the joys that mingle with and overlap the cares of the wife who looks after her own household. Why, my boy, there never was a happier woman than your mother, and she has worked, worked hard, all her married life, not because she had to, for I've always made enough to take care of her without it, but because she wanted to, because she would have been unhappy otherwise, and I dare you to say that your Anna May is any better than my wife—I just dare you! No, John; let her work; let her do just as much as she pleases to do in reason. It won't hurt her—there is no better exercise in the world than housework—and it will make her a better wife and, please God, a better mother when the time comes.

I just dare you!

It is true there are some women—and it pains me to see the number growing larger all the time—who have a strong aversion to domestic labor. I don't believe Anna May is one of them; but, if she is, let her follow her bent if it does not destroy your domestic relations. There is no more pitiable object on earth than a woman of energy and talent compelled to live a life of inaction because her little tin god of a husband would consider himself disgraced if she were to do a little honorable work on her own account. Don't be that kind of a chump. It's pure and unadulterated selfishness. That's all there is to it. If you love your wife, give her freedom. Let her do the work that pleases her best, for therein lies her greatest happiness. But keep her at home; keep her at home! I draw the line there. If her ambition takes her beyond the portal for her labor, employ a housekeeper, but preserve the home. It is her haven and yours. There is no satisfactory substitute for it. It attains its highest glory when the wife is its head and directing force, when her life is mainly devoted to its welfare; but, whether or no, it is home, and nothing else will serve. Your affectionate dad,

JOHN SNEED.

Not Afraid of Assassins.

President Benjamin Harrison used to ramble around Washington at night by himself. Colonel Dan Ransdell, a lifelong friend of the great Indianian, was President Harrison's marshal of the District of Columbia and kept in very close touch with the president all through his term. Colonel Ransdell lived north of Dupont circle, quite a mile and a half from the White House. He ceased to be surprised by the unexpected and unannounced visits made to him by the president at various hours of the night after General Harrison's first few months in the White House. Once when Colonel Ransdell remonstrated with him against venturing out at night unaccompanied, admonishing him of the danger of assassination, General Harrison said:

"An assassin cannot be dodged, Dan. I am as safe from harm on that score while walking from the White House to your residence after dark and alone as I am when receiving callers or going about the city in the daytime under the watchful eyes of detectives and policemen. The assassin always gets his prey when once he makes up his mind to do so. But I have no fear of assassination, least of all am I afraid of being assaulted in a dark street at night."—Washington Herald.

Ideals and Acts.

Ideals are more potent than acts. Let a millionaire give £10,000 to a hospital. The public is for the moment struck, but who save the institution itself remembers the gift next day? Let a "leader of society" start a charity bazaar. Let her gather a little court around her. Let the stall holders be visions of beauty, their coloring perhaps just a trifle "assisted," and under their spell let the buying be brisk and a great financial success be scored. The masses will read the account in their newspapers with wondering admiration, but they will find there no wholesome stimulus for themselves, since the motive of the brilliant function was rooted in display. In charity, as elsewhere, it is, I repeat, not the action, but the spirit of the agent, that permanently tells.—Montague Cruckanthorpe in Fortnightly Review.

From letters received by friends it is learned that Miss Julia Worth is having a most beautiful time in Seattle where she is received many marked attentions. Miss Worth's gentlemen friends in Wilmington and Spartanburg will not feel at rest until she returns from "the wooly out-yonder," but they are delighted to know that she has been the recipient of many pleasant attentions.

The most elaborate sailing party of the season was that given by Miss Bessie Bridgers Monday evening in the sharpie Virgie May, complimentary to Miss Mary Foster, of Graham, N. C. Fifty invitations were issued to friends some of whom, however, could not attend. A beautiful luncheon was served during the sail and an evening of pleasure was spent, the memory of which will not be even dimmed by the flight of time.

It was a beautiful little tea given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. Morrison W. Divine at her home, on Wrightsville Sound, in compliment to her sister, Mrs. Charles C. Chadbourn. The pretty home was made more attractive by decorations of flowers and palms which were directed by Mrs. Divine, displaying excellent taste. Seasonable refreshments were served and an afternoon of much pleasure was spent by the guests who numbered twenty.

The following from the Charlotte Chronicle will be read with regret by quite a number of Wilmington friends who had hoped that the Misses. Wilson would visit Wrightsville this season: "Misses Annie and Sarah Wilson, who have been in New York for several weeks, will return home the latter part of the month. They will take a boat trip from New York to Norfolk. After spending a few days in Charlotte they will join Mrs. Wilson at Montreat."

The crowds at Wrightsville Beach continue to grow and Lumina has again been found too small to accommodate them, notwithstanding the fact that four thousand feet of floor space has recently been added in the building of the new balcony. Mr. Hugh MacRae has given orders to have the balconies extended and widened all round, which will give another thousand feet of floor room. Work will begin immediately and some 200 new chairs and settees will be put in this week.

Wade Harris in the Charlotte Chronicle of Wednesday says:

"The person who goes to Wilmington and fails to take in the river trip, misses the best feature of the visit. The widely known and ever-popular Captain John W. Harper, still does business in the wheel house. He now owns two fine passenger steamers—the Wilmington and the Madeline, and the schedules to Carolina Beach, Southport, Fort Caswell and to sea, are as convenient as two swift boats can make them. Captain Harper stays by the Wilmington and has a bright and capable mate in Mister Fred Harper. They are a fine pair. The feeling to "get on Harper's boat" is just as strong now on the Wilmington visitors as it ever was."

The following announcements have been received by friends in this city. Mr. Stevens is formerly of Southport and is now editor of the Newbern Journal:

Mrs. Kenneth Rayner Jones has the honor of Announcing the marriage of her daughter
Leah Donnell
to
Mr. Charles Larminie Stevens, on the morning of Thursday, the eleventh of July
one thousand, nine hundred and seven-Newbern, North Carolina.

The moonlight nights of the past week have added much to the pleasure of the trips on the steamer Wilmington and Carolina Beach has been well patronized. There are notable improvements on the beach this season and the conveniences are better than in several seasons. New bathhouses for whites have been erected and a supply of excellent bath suits have been provided. The old building which had been used as a restaurant has been pulled down by Capt. Harper, who has succeeded in making a troublesome element understand that they would not be allowed to go to Carolina Beach, hence there is less inebriety there this season, since Capt. Harper has had the old barroom pulled down and hauled away.

AT ALL SODA FOUNTAINS

INSIST!!!

When you step up to a fountain or into a place where bottled drinks are sold tell the man you want Coca-Cola. Close your ears to the "just as good" argument because there is nothing just as good as Coca-Cola. INSIST. You have asked for Coca-Cola because you are convinced that is what you want—don't let a smooth-tongued salesman rule your judgement. If the man insists go to a place where they give their customers what they ask for. Imitations are made to deceive you, not to please you.

Coca-Cola

THE REASON—Coca-Cola not only quenches thirst and pleases the palate but it relieves fatigue, and is the only beverage that has vim and go to it.

Dr. "Bill" Moore Again Charged.

Dr. W. H. ("Bill") Moore is again in the toils for alleged quackery. He is a regularly licensed physician, but seems of late to have dropped into the habit of prescribing guaranteed short-time cures. Yesterday he was arrested on a warrant sworn out in Justice Bornemann's court by J. W. Hunt, a white man from the country, who alleges that Dr. "Bill" sold him for $8 a guaranteed cure for heart disease, promising the patient if he did not receive relief in a week, he could get his money back. The complainant also alleges that the Doctor told him he was conjured. When arraigned yesterday Dr. Moore gave bond for preliminary trial on the charge of false pretense Monday at 8:30 o'clock.

Mayor's Court Yesterday.

In the police court yesterday the only case of more than passing interest was one in which Henry Allen, a white man, was charged with cruelty to animals in allowing a mule which he owned to be driven when the animal had a very sore back. The case was continued for further investigation Monday at noon, the defendant giving bond for his appearace at that time. Willie Wright, colored driver of the Shadeland Dairy milk wagon, arrested by Officer M. P. Newton at the southeast corner of Front and Princess streets, for stopping his vehicle on the sidewalk crossing, was taxed with the cost. Two other cases of ordinary drunkeness netted the city $10 and costs.

Decorate for Firemen's Tournament.

It is proposed by the management of the Firemen's tournament to be held here early in August to give quite a spectacular setting to the big event and to this end the Decorative Committee has started a movement to have all the merchants and business men decorate their establishments for the big meet. Mr. W. H. Everett, a professional decorator from Richmond, Va., is in the city for the purpose of making decorations of the proper kind and will this week call on the merchants and business men with a proposition to do the work. It is hoped he will meet with favorable responses from all and that the city present quite a gala attire during the week when so many visitors will be here.

The classes of Mrs. King and Mrs. Sholar at Fifth Street M. E. Sunday School will run an excursion that day on the steamer Wilmington, leaving the city at 9:15 A. M. and returning leave Southport at 5 P. M. An opportunity will be given between the hours of 2 and 4 P. M. to visit the fortifications at Caswell at no extra cost. The fare for the round trip will be only 50 cents and the excursion should be well patronized.

Mr. McCormick to Locate Here.

The following is from this week's issue of the Maxton Scottish Chief: "We understand that J. Gilchrist McCormick, Esq., of the eminent firm of lawyers, McLean, McLean & McCormick, will sever his connection and move to Wilmington, where he will be admitted into that prominent commercial house, Smith & Gilchrist. Train From Fayetteville.

The following is from Friday afternoon's Fayetteville Observer: "A movement is making to induce the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad authorities to put on a special Sunday train from Fayetteville to Wilmington, leaving here at 7 o'clock in the morning and returning at 10 o'clock at night. This extra train would contribute greatly to the pleasure and recreation of business men, clerks and others, whose work forbids an outing during the week."

NO SIGN NOW OF NERVOUS HEADACHES.

Whoever has suffered from one of those severe nervous headaches can read the statement given below and find the same relief as Mrs. Cowan obtained. All that is needed is a trial of Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets. They possess marvelous curative powers.

Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablet Association, 53 and 55 Worth street, New York.

Gentlemen:

Up to two months ago, before I began taking Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets, I suffered greatly from nervous dyspepsia and severe headaches. I got so use to have these headaches once a week I was almost distracted. The medicine I took did not seem to do me any good. I heard Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets spoken of very highly and I got a bottle at Dr. Green's Drug Store. I have taken this bottle of these little tablets and have not had a sign of a headache for a month. My appetite is good; that old nervous feeling has gone and I am at last feeling like myself again thanks to Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets.

Yours truly,
MRS. M. O. COWAN,
708 Bladen Street, Wilmington, N. C.

LIFT AMERICAN CUP.

Designer of Sir Thomas Lipton Interviewed at New York.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

New York, July 20.—William Fife, the designer of Sir Thomas Lipton's cup yachts Shamrock I., and Shamrock III., declared today upon his arrival from Europe, that a British challenger for the American's cup would likely be found in American waters next year to make another bid to lift the historic international yachting trophy. No intimation was given by Mr. Fife as to whether the challenge would come from Sir Thomas Lipton or some yachtsman in England, but when asked if the report from Scotland that he had accepted a commission to design a Shamrock IV., was true, he smilingly replied that he would have to decline to make any answer under the circumstances.

The challenge for the cup, the designer said, would naturally be under the new racing rules of measurement, as no English yachtsman would think of attempting to capture the cup under the old rule, which governed the last races between Reliance and Shamrock III.

ADAMSON FROM CHARLOTTE.

Man Killed at Norfolk Engaged to Mecklenburg Girl.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Norfolk, Va., July 20.—George E. Adamson, aged 41 years, who was killed in a trolley accident near Ocean View last night had been working as a machinist in Charlotte, N. C., and Savannah, Ga. He had several days ago joined in Charlotte, N. C., Miss Alda C. Sherrill, of Cornelius, a small station near Charlotte, and the couple were here taking in the Jamestown Exposition before proceeding to Adamson's old home in Providence, R. I., where they were to have been married at the residence of his mother. They had procured their tickets and were to have left by steamer for Providence today. Miss Sherrill is here awaiting word from relatives of Adamson in Providence and the disposition of his body, after which she will return to Charlotte.

STANDARD OIL CASES.

Tennessee Federal Judge Holds Grand Jury Indictments Valid.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Memphis, Tenn., July 20.—Judge McCall, of the United States Court, today decided that a Federal grand jury which returned an indictment of 1,524 counts against the Standard Oil Company, was acting within its purisdiction. Standard Oil attorneys had made a motion to quash the indictment, alleging that the Federal grand jury of this district did not have the power in indict officers living in another State even though the alleged crimes were committed in Tennessee. This motion, Judge McCall has overruled. The effect of the decision will be that officers living in Indiana may be brought here to testify. The Standard Oil Company was indicted for forming alleged illegal combinations with certain railroads on freight rates to shut off competition.

ROANOKE RIOTERS FINED.

One of Them Sentenced to Jail—Higher Court.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Roanoke, Va., July 20.—J. F. Lester and Robert Bell, indicted on misdemeanor charges by a special grand jury in connection with the riots of last Saturday night, when a mob smashed all the Greek restaurants and shoeblacking places in town, were today tried in police court. Seventeen of the twenty men indicted are charged with misdemeanor and will be tried in police court. The other three are indicted for felony and will be tried in the higher court.

QUIET AT HAHNVILLE.

Troops Have Situation Well in Hand. Kidnapping Case.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

Hahnville, La., July 20.—With 250 militiamen on guard, the authorities are confident tonight that they can repulse any size mob which may attack the local jail to secure the Italian kidnapping prisoners. The sentinel posts have been extended to guard about two mies of the Mississippi river levee, where boats might land. No trouble is anticipated. A mob that had gone to Hahnville early this morning to lynch the prisoners were easily induced to return to New Orleans without having gotten within striking distance of the jail.

WARM WIRELETS.

Nine deaths, one person insane and many prostrations were reported yesterday from the oppressive heat and high humidity at Pittsburg. The temperature still hovers between 85 and 90 degrees.

The Fifth Maryland Regiment, three battalions, twelve companies and 500 men, in command of Colonel Henry M. Warfield, arrived at the Jamestown Exposition yesterday and will remain in camp one week.

A riot was reported to be in progress at the United Railroad car barns at 29th and Madison streets, San Francisco last night. Four men were reported to have been shot. The barn was on fire and the fire department had gone to the scene. All the police reserves were called out.

Oliver P. Benson, 51 years old, one of the best known iron rollers in the country, met a horrible death yesterday at the Carnegie Steel Company, Braddock, Pa. Benson was standing in front of the rolls when a huge steel rail, red hot, came out of the rollers and passed through his body. Death was almost instantaneous.

Andrew Trice, a negro, accused of the murder of his mistress with an axe, was lynched at Olive Branch, Miss., yesterday by thirty members of his own race. The negroes took Trice from officers who had arrested him; then killed him and threw his body into the river.

Walter Sousa, an electrician, and Harry Candee, a drug clerk, were electrocuted at Washington, D. C., yesterday afternoon. The two men were making repairs to the electric lights in the drug store, in which Candee was employed when they received shocks that caused their death later at a hospital.

While excavating yesterday on the site of the old parish church where Pocahontas was buried and which was destroyed by fire before 1727 workmen unearthed a skeleton which is supposed to be that of Pocahontas though experts are unable to arrive at any definite conclusion.

As the result of the engineer's mistaking signals to back for those to go ahead, the Merchants and Miners' freight and passenger steamer Essex stove her bow 45 feet through the heavy timbers of the company's wharf at Norfolk last night. The steamer was full speed ahead, but she escaped with apparently little injury.

Judge Moody yesterday instructed the jury in the case of James Hargis, on trial for complicity in the assassination of Dr. Cox, to acquit the prisoner, this being the last case of the famous Breathitt county cases in Kentuckey. The attorneys for the State withdrew from the case on the ground that they were unable to get their witnesses.

James H. Hawley, leading counsel for the State, addressed the jury eight hours in the Haywood case at Boise, Idaho, yesterday during three sessions of the court. Great crowds listened to him, none more intently than Haywood and none showed less emotion. Mr. Hawley was showered with congratulations upon his conclusion.

M. W. Quarles, a brother of former Congressman Quarles, of Stanuton, Va., was killed yesterday at Basic City by a Norfolk & Western freight train. He was hurrying to catch a Chesapeake & Ohio train to come to Staunton, when he was struck by the freight. Mr. Quarles was 59 years of age and is survived by a wife and two children.

The Farmers' National Bank, of Boyertown, Pa., is ordered closed by the Comptroller of the Currency upon a report of National Bank Examiner Bingham, showing it to be insolvent. J. W. Schofield, bank examiner, has been appointed receiver. The bank has a capital of $50,000. The trouble is said to have been caused by the cashier granting loans without proper security.

Seven inches of rain in the last three days has put the railroads out commission in the Marietta, O., region. Trains on the Muskingum river division of the Baltimore and Ohio are all annulled. A train on the Pennsylvania railroad got as far as Caldwell, but was compelled to return to Marietta, the tracks having been swept away. Farming interests have suffered greatly, corn, wheat and hay fields being washed into creeks and rivers.

William E. Corey, president of the steel trust, whose recent sensational marriage to Mabelle Gilman, the actress, created such a furore all over the country, returned with his bride from their honeymoon trip abroad yesterday. He says he has come back to resume the head of his corporation, in spite of the reports that his resignation has been asked, of which he says he knows nothing. Corey and his wife will take up their residence in their Fifth Avenue home, although they have purchased a Summer home abroad.

There is great interest, second only perhaps to the Thaw trial in this country, in Germany over the trial of Karlhau, the one time professor of Roman law at George Washington University at Washington, D. C., charged with the murder of his mother-in-law at Karlrhue. The trial has now been on four days. The scenes described about the court room are very similar to those in New York while the murderer of Standford White was at the bar of justice. Hau is standing up remarkably well in the face of pitiless facts pointing to his guilt. His demeanor is said to be assumed, and that he is losing confidence.

FIRE AT PORTSMOUTH.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

Norfolk, Va., July 20.—At 11:30 tonight fire broke out in the Kirn Hall building, corner of High and Middle streets, Portsmouth, and within thirty minutes, it was evident that the big structure was doomed. The damage was in all probability total $250,000.

The building was one of the largest in Portsmouth and was valued at $100,000. J. E. Anderson, stationery dealer, C. B. Clements, dry goods, and McCue's drug store were destroyed, all being on the first floor of the building. They carried large stocks. About twenty law offices occupy the three upper floors and will be total losses. Surrounding property was damaged.

"DRAWING THE LONG BOW."

Some Remarkable Exploits Credited to Shooters of Arrows.

The expression "drawing a long bow" does not of necessity mean the telling of a falsehood. It sometimes refers to a wonderful story which may be true enough, but which is so marvelous as to require a firm trust in the veracity of the narrator to enable the hearer to believe it. Some of the longest bows of this sort have been drawn about bows and arrows.

These stories began long ago. Virgil in the "Æneid" tells of four archers who were shooting for a prize, the mark being a pigeon tied by a cord to the mast of a ship. The first man hit the mast, the second cut the cord, and the third shot the pigeon as it flew away. The fourth archer, having nothing left to shoot, drew his bow and sent his arrow flying toward the sky with such speed that the friction of the air set the feathers on fire, and it swept on like a meteor to disappear in the clouds.

The stories told of Robin Hood's archery, illustrated by his wonderful performance as Locksley in Scott's "Ivanhoe," are also a decided strain upon modern credulity. The famous story of William Tell, doubted by many persons, is believed by others to have a foundation of fact. There was a Dane named Foke of whom the same story is told, and William of Cloudesley, an Englishman, is said to have shot an apple from his son's head merely to show his expertness.

Most stories of bows and arrows relate to the accurate aim of the archers, but a Frenchman, Blaise de Vigenene, tells one that shows the tremendous force with which an arrow may be propelled if the bow be strong and long enough. According to his own account of the matter, he saw Barbarossa, a Turk, admiral of a ship called the Grand Solyman, send an arrow from his bow right through a cannon ball.

Whether the cannon ball had a hole through it or not he neglects to inform us, probably not considering so trifling a matter worth mention.

Perhaps the most astounding of all stories about arrow shooting is that of the Indians that used to inhabit Florida. It is said that a group of them would form a circle, then one would throw an ear of Indian corn into the air. The rest would shoot at it and shell it of every grain before it fell to the ground. Sometimes the arrows would strike it so hard and fast that it would remain suspended in the air for several minutes, and the cob never fell until the last grain had been shot away.

It is such stories as this which fully justify the use to which the expression "drawing the long bow" is sometimes put.—Chicago News.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Don't hunt trouble. It will find you.

There is not the slightest sense back of a great deal of hope.

When a man talks about his principles, he usually means his prejudices.

There isn't a great deal of sunshine in the smile a man produces when he loses.

A man is always willing to lend a helping hand, but he does hate to lend money.

The man who wants to sell it is usually the one who has the least political influence.

The man who brags usually has a lot to say about the things he is going to do. What he has done is far less important.

When a man stops to listen to two others arguing, he isn't after information. He wants to butt in and air his own views on one side or the other.—Atchison Globe.

THE SACRED GANGES.

Bathing at Sunrise of the Hindoo Worshipers.

A MOST CURIOUS SPECTACLE.

Tens of Thousands of Religious Zealots Lave Themselves in the Frigid Waters of the Polluted Stream—The Ghouls at the Crematory.

One of the greatest human spectacles in the world—a most amazing and complete exhibition of religious zeal—is the sunrise gathering of Ganges worshipers along the river bank at Benares, India. Eliza R. Skidmore, foreign secretary of the National Geographic society, made a study of these religious observances of believers of Hindooism at Benares and wrote a comprehensive article for the National Geographic Magazine.

The author in recounting her experiences says: "Sightseeing begins at Benares before daybreak, and one drives through two miles of uninteresting streets in the starlight and gray gloaming across to the boats at the river bank. In midwinter, the cold weather months of Indian travel, it is bitterly cold at that hour—hoarfrost on the ground, blue and lilac frost haze in the air. One needs all the fur wraps and rugs one can get to drive down to the river, yet is glad for the shelter of a sun umbrella before noon.

"Every one at that hour was hurrying in the one direction, and when we had raced down the great steps and the houseboat was poled off from the bank all the river front was before us like a theater stage lighted by the rising sun striking full upon it.

"As the sun shone red, orange and yellow through the thick frost haze a great murmur of voices rose from the length of the ghats, the tens of thousands of fervent worshipers, standing on platforms built over the water and standing waist deep in the water, repeating in muttered chant the ancient Vedic hymn.

"They dipped themselves beneath the swirling mud flood; they lifted the water in jars and poured it over their heads; they lifted it in their hands and let it trickle through their fingers or run down their arms, and they dipped tufts of sacred grass in the water and sprinkled themselves; they pressed their nostrils, they twisted their fingers and did all manner of motions as they chanted and muttered to themselves, each one rapt, intent, absorbed entirely in the long religious recitals.

"At the woman's ghat every woman carries a brass lota, or water jar, or a still larger and heavier jar of red pottery, and the unending procession of gracefully draped figures going up and down the broad ghat is an unending delight. Swathed head and all in their winding saris, they wade into the river and pray, one is sure, to every Hindoo deity which the ten fingers represent to let them come into the world again in some human form less ignoble than a woman's.

"They go back to shore and deftly envelop themselves in fresh saris and drop the wet ones to the steps without once uncovering the face or exposing more than the feet and hands. They scour their brass lotas with Ganges mud, they wash their hair with sacred muck and fill the jars to take home at the very mouths of the city sewers.

"The devotees show no fastidious choice in dipping the water they drink. All is Ganges water, and all is sacred, even when the surface is afloat with city refuse discharging from the drainpipes at their very elbows.

"The cremation ground is only a waste space of grimy sand and gravel between two stone terraces, a neglected bank gullied by rains, with pyres, building and half consumed, scattered irregularly, and ghouls poking among the ashes for coins or jewels. More systematic ghouls carry pans of ashes to the water's edge and wash this pay dirt like any placer miner.

"Alongside this revolting sequel to yesterday's burnings lie fresh bodies, wrapped in white sheets and garlands of marigolds. The bodies are dipped in the Ganges and laid in rows, with the sacred stream laving their feet and profane ghouls washing pay dirt from yesterday's pyres between and beside them, shaking grime and cinders over the hapless flower wreathed bundles.

"This crude open air crematory is the monopoly of the domri, lowest caste of all peoples, who charge extravagantly for their services, for the wood, the oil and the flame which lights the funeral torch for touching off the pyre.

"The earlier in the morning the burning occurs the greater merit and certainty of paradise for the dead one, and the domri's charges run from extravagant sums for burning the rich and noble at sunrise and decrease toward noon and afternoon, when the very poor and the jail criminals are hurriedly burned or half burned for a few annas and the rubbish and bones shoveled down the bank."

Pretty Near It.

"Uncle Zeb," cautioned his city nephew, pointing to the finger bowl, "you are not expected to drink out of that, you know."

"Gosh!" said Uncle Zeb, "You'll be telling me next that it's to wash my hands in!"—Chicago Tribune.

One and a Million.

"That's the first time I ever sold a single envelope," said the young woman at a big stationer's store in the city's center. "I've always sold them in packages, but that gentleman came in with a letter in his hand and asked for an envelope, and I sold him one for a cent. I imagine that's the smallest sale that has been made in this establishment since it opened. The biggest I ever made happened to be in the envelope line too. A rather roughly dressed man came in, asked to see our envelopes and wanted to know the price by the thousand. I told him. Then he asked the price by the million. I got the figures from our manager, who smiled as he gave them to me. Yet the man ordered a million envelopes, and when we asked for reference he said he would as lief pay the bill on the spot, which he did from a roll of yellow back bank notes about the size of a loaf of bread. We delivered the envelopes, but haven't seen the purchaser since."—Philadelphia Record.

"Please, mum," said a tramp, "would you be so kind as to let me have a needle and thread?"

"Well, y-e-s," said the housewife at the door; "I can let you have that."

"Thankee, mum. Now, you'd oblige me very much if you'd let me have a bit of cloth for a patch."

"Yes, here is some."

"Thankee very much, mum. It's a little different color from my suit, I see. Perhaps, mum, you could spare me some of your husband's old clothes that this patch will match."

"Well, I declare! You're clever, my man, and I'll give you an old suit. Here is one."

"Thankee greatly, mum. I see it's a little large, mum, but if you'll kindly furnish me with a square meal mebby I can fill it out."—Woman's Home Companion.

Overlooked the Side Issue.

Andy Horn, who was once a well known proprietor of a large saloon on the east side, New York, was hiring as barkeeper a man since prominent in political life and who told the story with considerable glee.

"I'll give you $10 a month," said Andy.

"Ten dollars! A man can't live on that!"

"You forget the pickings," said Andy in serious earnest. "The barkeepers down here tell each other that my grill's the easiest one to work in New York."

"I took the job without further argument," says the ex-bartender.

Broiled Prairie Dog.

"Prairie dog, briled, is darn good eatin'," said the zoo keeper, "but you couldn't get a plainsman to admit it.

"The plainsmen claims that owls and rattlesnakes and prairie dogs fraternize together, share holes and eat one another's dead corpses at the end. They claim that to eat prairie dog is the same thing as to eat rattlesnake or owl.

"Of course it's only a superstition, but it holds good on the plains, and prairie dog is never eaten there. I eat it, though, every chance I get. It has a fine taste. It tastes, by gum, like young chicken."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

How to Prevent Nightmare.

Referring to the frequency with which unpleasant dreams, and more particularly the classical nightmare, occur, Dr. Kehrer, the Munich specialist says: "Persons who are subject to disturbances of this sort should allow three or four hours to elapse between the last meal and going to bed; should not let this last meal be too hearty a one and should make it a point to avoid all indigestible dishes and alcoholic drinks with the evening meal."

CHAPTER XV.

FOR once the humorous expression had vanished from Captain Kempt's face, and that good natured man sat in the dainty drawing room of the flat a picture of perplexity. Dorothy had told him the story of the nihilist, saying she intended to purchase the yacht and outlining what she proposed to do with it when it was her own. Now she sat silent opposite the genial captain, while Katherine stood by the window and talked enough for two, sometimes waxing indignant and occasionally giving in terse language an opinion of her father, as is the blessed privilege of every girl born in the land of the free, while the father took the censure with the unprotesting mildness of his nature.

"My dear girls, you really must listen to reason. What you propose to do is so absurd that it doesn't even admit of argument. Why, it's a filibustering expedition, that's what it is. You girls are as crazy as Walker of Nicaragua. Do you imagine that a retired captain of the United States navy is going to take command of a pirate craft of far less legal standing than the Alabama, for then we were at war, but now we are at peace. Do you actually propose to attack the domain of a friendly country? Oh!" cried the captain, with a mighty explosion of breath, for at this point his supply of language entirely gave out.

"No one would know anything about it," persisted Katherine.

"Not know about it? With a crew of men picked up here in New York and coming back to New York? Not know about it? Bless my soul, the papers would be full of it before your men were an hour on shore. In the first place, you'd never find the rock."

"Then what's the harm of going in search of it?" demanded his daughter. "Besides that, Johnson knows exactly where it is."

"Johnson, Johnson! You're surely not silly enough to believe Johnson's cock and bull story?"

"I believe every syllable he uttered. The man's face showed that he was speaking the truth."

"But, my dear Kate, you didn't see him at all, as I understand the yarn. He was here alone with you, was he not, Dorothy?"

Dorothy smiled sadly.

"I told Kate all about it and gave my own impression of the man's appearance."

"You are too sensible a girl to place any credit in what he said surely?"

"I did believe him nevertheless," replied Dorothy.

"Why, look you here. False in one thing, false in all. I'll just take a single point. He speaks of a spring sending water through the cells up there in the rock. Now, that is an impossibility. Wherever a spring exists, it comes from a source higher than itself."

"There are lots of springs up in the mountains," interrupted Katherine. "I know one on Mount Washington that is ten times as high as the Rock in the Baltic."

"Quite so, Katherine, quite so, but nevertheless there is a lake, subterraneous or above ground, which feeds your White Mountain spring, and such a lake must be situated higher than the spring is. Why, girl, you ought to study hydrometeorology as well as chemistry. Here is a rock jutting up in midocean"—

"It's in the Baltic, near the Russian coast," snapped Kate, "and I've no doubt there are mountains in Finland that contain the lake which feeds the spring."

"How far is that rock from the Finnish coast, then?"

"Two miles and a half," said Kate quick as an arrow speeding from a bow.

"Captain, we don't know how far it is from the coast," amended Dorothy.

"I'll never believe the thing exists at all."

"Why, yes it does, father. How can you speak like that? Don't you know Lieutenant Drummond fired at it?"

"How do you know it was the same rock?"

"Because the rock fired back at him. There can't be two like that in the Baltic."

"No, nor one either," said the captain, nearing the end of his patience.

"Captain Kempt," said Dorothy very soothingly, as if she desired to quell the rising storm, "you take the allegation about the spring of water to prove that Johnson was telling untruths. I expect him here within an hour, and I will arrange that you have an opportunity, privately, of cross examining him. I think when you see the man and listen to him you will believe. What makes me so sure that he is telling the truth is the fact that he mentioned the foreign vessel firing at this rock, which I knew to be true, and which he could not possibly have learned anything about."

"He might very well have learned all particulars from the papers, Dorothy. They were full enough of the subject at the time, and, remembering this, he thought to strengthen his story by"—

Katherine interrupted with great scorn.

"By adding verisimilitude to an otherwise bald and unconvincing narrative."

"Quite so, Kate. Exactly what I was going to say myself. But, to come back to the project itself, granting the existence of the rock, granting the truth of Johnson's story, granting everything, granting even that the young men are imprisoned there, of which we have not the slightest proof, we could no more succeed in capturing that place from a frail pleasure yacht"—

"It's built like a cruiser," said Katherine.

"Even if it were built like a battleship we would have no chance whatever. Why, that rock might defy a regular fleet. Our venture would simply be a marine Jameson raid which would set the whole world laughing when people came to hear of it."

"Johnson said he could take it with half a dozen men."

"No, Kate," corrected Dorothy; "he said the very reverse; that two or three determined men on the rock with repeating rifles could defeat a host. It was I who suggested that we should throw a shell and then rush the entrance in the confusion."

Captain Kempt threw up his hands in a gesture of despair.

"Great heavens, Dorothy Amhurst, whom I have always regarded as the mildest, sweetest and most charming of girls, to hear you calmly propose to throw a shell among a lot of innocent men defending their own territory against a perfectly unauthorized invasion! Throw a shell, say you, as if you were talking of tossing a copper to a beggar! Oh, Lord, I'm growing old! What will become of this younger generation? Well, I give it up. Dorothy, my dear, whatever will happen to those unfortunate Russians I shall never recover from the shock of your shell. The thing is absolutely impossible. Can't you see that the moment you get down to details? How are you going to procure your shells or your shell firing gun? They are not to be bought at the first hardware store you come to on Sixth avenue."

"Johnson says he can get them," proclaimed Kate, with finality.

"Oh, damn Johnson! Dorothy, I beg your pardon, but really this daughter of mine, combined with that Johnson of yours, is just a little more than I can bear."

"Then what are we to do?" demanded his daughter. "Sit here with folded hands?"

"That would be a great deal better than what you propose. You should do something sane. You mustn't involve a pair of friendly countries in war. Of course the United States would utterly disclaim your act and discredit me if I were lunatic enough to undertake such a wild goose chase, which I'm not. But, on the other hand, if two of our girls undertook such an expedition no man can predict the public clamor that might arise. Why, when the newspapers get hold of a question you never know where they will end it. Undoubtedly you two girls should be sent to prison, and with equal undoubtedness the American people wouldn't permit it."

"You bet they wouldn't," said Katherine, dropping into slang.

"Well, then, if they wouldn't there's war."

"One moment, Captain Kempt," said Dorothy again in her mildest tones, for voices had again begun to run high. "You spoke of doing something sane. You understand the situation. What should you counsel us to do?"

The captain drew a long breath and leaned back in his chair.

"There, dad, it's up to you," said Katherine. "Let us hear your proposal, and then you'll learn how easy it is to criticise."

"Well," said the captain hesitatingly, "there's our diplomatic service"—

"Utterly useless. One man is a Russian and the other an Englishman. Diplomacy not only can do nothing, but won't even try," cried Kate triumphantly.

"Yet," said the captain, with little confidence, "although the two men are foreigners, the two girls are Americans."

"We don't count; we've no votes," said Kate. "Besides, Dorothy tried the diplomatic service and could not even get accurate information from it. Now, father, third time and out."

"Four balls are out, Kate, and I've only fanned the air twice. Now, girls, I'll tell you what I'd do. You two come with me to Washington. We will seek a private interview with the president. He will get into communication with the czar, also privately and outside of all regular channels. The czar will put machinery in motion that is sure to produce those two young men much more effectually and speedily than any cutthroat expedition on a yacht."

"I think," said Dorothy, "that is an excellent plan."

"Of course it is!" cried the captain enthusiastically. "Don't you see the pull the president will have? Why, they've put an Englishman into 'the jug,' and when the president communicates this fact to the czar he will be afraid to refuse, knowing that the next appeal may be from America to England, and when you add a couple of American girls to that political mixup, why, what chance has the czar?"

"The point you raise, captain," said Dorothy, "is one I wish to say a few words about. The president cannot get Mr. Drummond released because the czar and all his government will be compelled to deny that they know anything of him. Even the president couldn't guarantee that the Englishman would keep silence if he were set at liberty. The czar would know that, but your plan would undoubtedly produce Prince Ivan Lermontoff. All the president has to do is to tell the czar that the prince is engaged to an American girl and Lermontoff will be allowed to go."

"But," objected the captain, "as the prince knows the Englishman is in prison, how could they be sure of John keeping quiet when Drummond is his best friend?"

"He cannot know that, because the prince was arrested several days before Drummond was."

"They have probably chucked them both into the same cell," said the captain, but Dorothy shook her head.

"If they had intended to do that they would doubtless have arrested them together. I am sure that one does not know the fate of the other, therefore the czar can quite readily let Lermontoff go, and he is certain to do that at a word from the president. Besides this, I am as confident that Jack is not in the Trogzmondoff as I am sure that Drummond is. Johnson said it was a prison for foreigners."

"Oh, Dorothy," cried the captain, with a deep sigh, "if we've got back again to Johnson"— He waved his hand and shook his head.

The maid opened the door and said, looking at Dorothy:

"Mr. Paterson and Mr. Johnson."

"Just show them into the morning room," said Dorothy, rising. "Captain Kempt, it is awfully good of you to have listened so patiently to a scheme of which you couldn't possibly approve."

"Patiently!" sniffed the daughter.

"Now I want you to do me another kindness."

She went to the desk and picked up a piece of paper.

"Here is a check I have signed—a blank check. I wish you to buy the yacht Walrus just as she stands and make the best bargain you can for me. A man is so much better at this kind of negotiation than a woman."

"I wish you to buy the yacht Walrus just as she stands."

"But surely, my dear Dorothy, you won't persist in buying this yacht?"

"It's her own money, father," put in Katherine.

"Keep quiet," said the captain, rising, for the first time speaking with real severity, whereupon Katherine, in spite of the fact that she was older than twenty-one, was wise enough to obey.

"Yes, I am quite determined, captain," said Dorothy sweetly.

"But, my dear woman, don't you see how you've been hoodwinked by this man Johnson? He is shy of a job. He has already swindled you out of $20,000."

"No; he asked for $10,000 only, Captain Kempt, and I voluntarily doubled the amount."

"Nevertheless he has worked you up to believe that these young men are in that rock. He has done this for a very crafty purpose, and his purpose seems likely to succeed. He knows he will be well paid, and you have promised him a bonus besides. If he, with his Captain Kidd crew, gets you on that yacht, you will only step ashore by giving him every penny you possess. That's his object. He knows you are starting out to commit a crime—that's the word, Dorothy; there's no use in our mincing matters—you will be perfectly helpless in his hands. Of course I could not allow my daughter Kate to go on such an expedition."

"I am over twenty-one years old," cried Kate, the light of rebellion in her eyes.

"I do not intend that either of you shall go, Katherine."

"Dorothy, I'll not submit to that," cried Katherine, with a rising tremor of anger in her voice. "I shall not be set aside like a child. Who has more at stake than I? And as for capturing the rock, I'll dynamite it myself and bring home as large a specimen of it as the yacht will carry and set it up on Bedloe's island beside the goddess and say, 'There's your statue of Liberty, and there's your statue of Tyranny!'"

"Katherine," chided her father, "I never before believed that a child of mine could talk such driveling nonsense."

"Paternal heredity, father," retorted Kate.

"Your presidential plan, Captain Kempt," interposed Dorothy, "is excellent so far as Prince Lermontoff is

Note of Warning

To The Public:

The Keeley Cure has now been in successful operation for 28 consecutive years and the merits and reputation of the Dr. Leslie E. Keeley Remedies have been throughly established. Because of this fact, many imitators are seeking to turn this knowledge to their own advantage by falsely claiming that they are able to sell and administer our remedies and treatment. It should be borne in mind that the Keeley Remedies are only to be obtained at establishments known by the uniform name of The Keeley Institute. There is one or more of these establishments in nearly every State in the Union, besides several in foreign countries. THERE IS ONLY ONE KEELEY INSTITUTE IN THE STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, AND THAT IS LOCATED AT GREENSBORO. At all Keeley Institutes the remedies used are procured from our laboratory, and in all cases they are administered by physicians who have been especially instructed by us. It follows, therefore, that all other establishments claiming to be able to sell our remedies and administer our treatment are obtaining money under false pretenses and will be dealt with accordingly. The public is warned that under no circumstances can Keeley remedies or treatment be obtained except at authorized Keeley Institutes. These imitators sometimes adopt similar names to those by which our remedies are known, but if patients will take pains to see that they are in an authorized Keeley Institute they need not fear imposition. The Keeley remedies will cure inebriety, all kinds of drug using, the tobacco habit and neurasthenia; they are never administered in hospitals and no patients are treated at Keeley Institutes for other than the above named diseases.

THE KEELEY INSTITUTE, at Greensboro, N. C., is the only one in this State, and all representations that there is in this State any cure that is identical with or the same as the Keeley Double Chloride of Gold Cure, are malicious, false and made for the purpose of deceiving. We learn with indignant regret that such claim is being made, and feeling that if it be hurtful to us it will prove even more disastrous to those who are deceived thereby, we sound this note of warning.

concerned, but it cannot rescue Lieutenant Drummond. Now, there are two things you can do for me that will make me always your debtor, as, indeed, I am already, and the first is to purchase for me the yacht. The second is to ferm your own judgment of the man Johnson and if you distrust him then engage for me one-half the crew and see that they are picked Americans."

"First sane idea I have heard since I came into this flat," growled the captain.

"The Americans won't let the Finlander hold me for ransom, you may depend upon that."

It was a woebegone look the gallant captain cast on the demure and determined maiden; then, feeling his daughter's eye upon him, he turned toward her.

"I'm going, father," she said, with a firmness quite equal to his own, and he, on his part, recognized when his daughter had toed the danger line. He indulged in a laugh that had little of mirth in it.

"All I can say is that I am thankful you haven't made up your minds to kidnap the czar. Of course you are going, Kate. So am I."

CHAPTER XVI.

As the sailing boat cast off and was shoved away from the side of the steamer there were eight men aboard. Six grasped the oars, and the young clerk who had signed the documents given to him by the captain took the rudder, motioning Lermontoff to a seat beside him. All the forward part of the boat and indeed the space well back toward the stern was piled with boxes and bags.

"What is this place called?" asked the prince, but the young steersman did not reply.

Tying the boat to iron rings at the small landing where the steps began, three of the men shipped their oars. Each threw a bag over his shoulder, walked up half a dozen steps and waited. The clerk motioned Lermontoff to follow, so he stepped on the shelf of rock and looked upward at the rugged stairway cut between the main island and an outstanding perpendicular ledge of rock. The steps were so narrow that the procession had to move up in Indian file—three men with bags, then the prince and the clerk, followed by three more men with boxes. Lermontoff counted 237 steps, which brought him to an elevated platform projecting from a doorway cut in the living rock, but shielded from all sight of the sea. The eastern sun shone through this doorway, but did not illumine sufficiently the large room whose walls, ceiling and floor were of solid stone. At the farther end a man in uniform sat behind a long table on which burned an oil lamp with a green shade. At his right hand stood a broad, round brazier containing glowing coals, after the oriental fashion, and the officer was holding his two hands over it and rubbing them together. The room nevertheless struck chill as a cellar, and Lermontoff heard a constant smothered roar of water.

The clerk, stepping forward and saluting, presented to the governor seated there the papers and envelopes given him by the captain. The officer selected a blue sheet of paper and scrutinized it for a moment under the lamp.

"Where are the others?"

"We have landed first the supplies, governor, then the boat will return for the others."

The governor nodded and struck a bell with his open palm. There entered a big man with a bunch of keys at his belt, followed by another, who carried a lighted lantern.

"No. 9," said the governor to the jailer.

"I beg your pardon, sir, am I a prisoner?" asked Lermontoff.

The governor gave utterance to a sound that was more like the grunt of a pig than the ejactilation of a man. He did not answer, but looked up at the questioner, and the latter saw that his face, gaunt almost as that of a living skeleton, was pallid as putty.

"No. 9," he repeated, whereupon the jailer and the man with the lantern put a hand each on Lermontoff's shoulders and marched him away. They walked together down a long passage, the swaying lantern casting its yellow rays on the iron bolts of door after door until at last the jailer stopped, threw back six bolts, inserted a key, unlocked the door and pushed it ponderously open. The lantern showed it to be built like the door of a safe; but, unlike that of a safe, it opened inward. As soon as the door came ajar Lermontoff heard the sound of flowing water, and when the three entered he noticed a rapid little stream sparkling in the rays of the lantern at the further end of the cell. He saw a shelf of rock and a stone bench before it. The jailer placed his hands on a black loaf, while the other held up the lantern.

"That will last you four days," said the jailer.

"Well, my son, judging from the unappetizing look of it, I think it will last me much longer."

The jailer made no reply, but he and the man with the lantern retired, drawing the door heavily after them. Lermontoff heard the bolts thrust into place and the turn of the key. Then silence fell, all but the babbling of the water. He stood still in the center of the cell, his hands thrust deep in the pockets of his overcoat, and, in spite of this heavy garment, he shivered a little.

"Jack, my boy," he muttered, "this is a new deal, as they say in the west. I can imagine a man going crazy here if it wasn't for that stream. I never knew what darkness meant before. Well, let's find out the size of our kingdom."

He groped for the wall and, stumbling against the stone bench, whose existence he had forgotten, pitched head forward to the table and sent the four day loaf rolling on the floor. He made an ineffectual grasp after the loaf, fearing it might fall into the stream and be lost to him, but he could not find it, and now his designs for measuring the cell gave place to the desire of finding that loaf. He got down on his hands and knees and felt the stone floor inch by inch for half an hour, as he estimated the time, but never once did he touch the bread.

"How helpless a man is in the dark, after all!" he muttered to himself. "I must do this systematically, beginning at the edge of the stream."

On all fours he reached the margin of the rivulet and felt his way along the brink till his head struck the opposite wall. He turned round, took up a position that he guessed was three feet nearer the door and again traversed the room, becoming so eager in the search that he forgot for the moment the horror of his situation, just as when engaged in a chemical experiment everything else vanished from his mind, and thus after several journeys back and forth he was again reminded of the existence of the stone bench by butting against it when he knew he was several feet from the wall. Rubbing his head, he muttered some unfavorable phrases regarding the immovable bench, then crawled round it twice and resumed his transverse excursions. At last he reached the wall that held the door and now with breathless eagerness rubbed his shoulder against it till he came to the opposite corner. He knew he had touched with knees and hands practically every square inch of space in the floor, and yet no bread.

"Now, that's a disaster," cried he, getting up on his feet and stretching himself. "Still, a man doesn't starve in four days. I've cast my bread on the waters. It has evidently gone down the stream. Now, what's to hinder a man escaping by means of that water course? Still, if he did, what would be the use? He'd float out into the Baltic sea and if able to swim round the rock would merely be compelled to knock at the front door and beg admission again. No, by Jove! There's the boat, but they probably guard it night and day, and a man in the water would have no chance against one in the boat. Perhaps there's gratings between the cells. Of course there's bound to be. No one would leave the bed of a stream clear for any one to navigate. Prisoners would visit each other in their cells, and that's not allowed in any respectable prison. I wonder if there's any one next door on either side of me. An iron grid won't keep out the sound. I'll try." And, going again to the margin of the watercourse, he shouted several times as loudly as he could, but only a sepulchral echo, as if from a vault, replied to him.

"I imagine the adjoining cells are empty. No enjoyable companionship to be expected here. I wonder if they've got the other poor devils up from the steamer yet. I'll sit down on the bench and listen."

He could have found the bench and shelf almost immediately by groping round the wall, but he determined to exercise his sense of direction, to pit himself against the darkness.

"I need not hurry," he said, "I may be a long time here."

In his mind he had a picture of the cell, but now that he listened to the water it seemed to have changed its direction, and he found he had to rearrange this mental picture and make a different set of calculations to fit the new position. Then he shuffled slowly forward with hands outstretched, but he came to the wall and not to the bench. Again he mapped out his route, again endeavored and again failed.

"This is bewildering," he muttered. "How the darkness baffles a man! For the first time in my life I appreciate to the full the benediction of God's command, 'Let there be light.'"

He stood perplexed for a few moments, and, deeply thinking, his hands automatically performed an operation as the servants of habit. They took from his pocket his cigarette case, selected a tube of tobacco, placed it between his lips, searched another pocket, brought out a matchbox and struck a light. The striking of the match startled Lermontoff as if it had been an explosion; then he laughed, holding the match above his head, and there at his feet saw the loaf of black bread. It seemed as if somebody had twisted the room end for end. The door was where he thought the stream was, and thus he learned that sound gives no indication of direction to a man blindfolded. The match began to wane, and feverishly he lit his cigarette.

"Why didn't I think of the matches, and, oh, what a pity I failed to fill my pockets with them that night of the professor's dinner party! To think that matches are selling at this moment in Sweden 250 for a halfpenny!"

Guided by the spark at the end of his cigarette, he sought the bench and sat down upon it. He was surprised to find himself so little depressed as was actually the case. He did not feel in the least disheartened. Something was going to happen on his behalf. Of that he was quite certain. It was perfectly ridiculous that even in Russia a loyal subject who had never done any illegal act in his life, a nobleman of the empire and a friend of the czar should be incarcerated for long without trial and even without accusation. He had no enemies that he knew of and many friends, and yet he experienced a vague uneasiness when he remembered that his own course of life had been such that he would not be missed by his friends. For more than a year he had been in England, at sea and in America, so much absorbed in his researches that he had written no private letters worth speaking of, and if any friend were asked his whereabouts he was likely to reply:

"Oh, Lermontoff is in some German university town or in England or traveling elsewhere. I haven't seen him or heard of him for months. Lost in a wilderness or in an experiment perhaps."

These unhappy meditations were interrupted by the clang of bolts. He thought at first it was his own door that was being opened, but a moment later knew it was the doof of the next cell upstream. The sound of course could not penetrate the extremely thick wall, but came through the aperture whose roof arched the watercourse. From the voices he estimated that several prisoners were being put into one cell, and he wondered whether or not he cared for a companion. It would all depend. If fellow prisoners hated each other, their enforced proximity might prove unpleasant.

"We are hungry," he heard one say. "Bring us food."

The jailer laughed.

"I will give you something to drink first."

"That's right!" three voices shouted. "Vodka, vodka!"

Then the door clanged shut again, and he heard the murmur of voices in Russian, but could not make out what was said. One of the new prisoners, groping round, appeared to have struck the stone bench, as he himself had done. The man in the next cell swore coarsely, and Lermontoff, judging from such snatches of their conversation as he could hear that they were persons of a low order, felt no desire to make their more intimate acquaintance and so did not shout to them, as he had intended to do. And now he missed something that had become familiar; thought it was a cigarette he desired, for the one he had lit had been smoked to his very lips, then he recognized it was the murmur of the stream that had ceased.

"Ah, they can shut it off," he said; "that's interesting. I must investigate and learn whether or no there is communication between the cells; not very likely though."

He crawled on hands and knees until he came to the bed of the stream, which was now damp, but empty. Kneeling down in its course, he worked his way toward the lower cell and, as he expected, came to stout iron bars. Crouching thus he sacrificed a second match and estimated that the distance between the two cells was as much as ten feet of solid rock and saw also that behind the perpendicular iron bars were another horizontal set, then another perpendicular, then a fourth horizontal.

While in this position he was startled by a piercing scream to the rear. He backed out from the tunnel and stood upright once more. He heard the sound of people splashing round in the water. The screamer began to jabber like a maniac, punctuating his ravings with shrieks. Another was cursing vehemently and a third appealing to the saints. Lermontoff quickly knelt down in the watercourse, this time facing the upper cell, and struck his third match. He saw that a steel shield, reminding him of the thin shutter between the lenses of a camera, had been shot across the tunnel behind the second group of cross bars, and as an engineer he could not but admire the skill of the practical expert who had constructed this diabolical device, for in spite of the pressure on the other side hardly a drop of water oozed through. He tried to reach the shield, but could not. It was just beyond the touch of his fingers with his arm thrust through the two sets of bars, but if he could have stretched that far with the first bar retarding his shoulder, he knew his hand would be helpless even if he had some weapon to puncture the steel shield. The men would be drowned before he could accomplish anything unless he was at the lever in the passage outside.

Crawling into his cell again, he heard no more of the chatter and cries of the maniac, and he surmised that the other two were fighting for places on bench or shelf, which was amply large enough to have supported both had they not been too demented with fear to recognize that fact. The cursing man was victorious, and now he stood alone on the shelf, roaring maledictions. Then there was the sound of a plunge, and Lermontoff, standing there helpless and shivering, heard the prisoner swim round and round his cell like a furious animal, muttering and swearing.

"Don't exhaust yourself like that," shouted Lermontoff. "If you want to live, cling to the hole at either of the two upper corners. The water can't rise above you then, and you can breathe till it subsides."

The other either did not hear or did not heed, but tore around and around in his confined tank, thrashing the water like a drowning whale.

"Poor devil!" moaned Jack. "What's the use of telling him what to do? He is doomed in any case. The other two are now better off."

A moment later the water began to dribble through the upper aperture into Jack's cell, increasing and increasing until there was the roar of a waterfall, and he felt the cold, splashing drops spurt against him. Beyond this there was silence. It was perhaps ten minutes after that the lever was pulled, and the water belched forth from the lower tunnel like a mill race broken loose, temporarily flooding the floor so that Jack was compelled to stand on the bench.

He sunk down shivering on the stone shelf, laid his arms on the stone pillow and buried his face in them.

"My God, my God!" he groaned.

THE COTTON MARKET.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

New York, July 20.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of three points in July, which was influenced by covering and absence of offerings, while later months were one to four points lower, owing to disappointing cables and good weather over the belt. Trading was quiet during the early session and prices were steadied by week-end covering which may have been promoted by bullish week-end figures, although the business hardly indicated any change in the general attitude toward the market. A leading Texas paper reports that forty bales of new crop have been ginned at Corpus Christi against none last year. During the middle of the morning prices here were steady at a net advance of about one to three points, with the market showing no special feature. The market closed quiet with prices net one to six points lower.

Receipts at the ports today, 749 bales, against 2,223 last week, and 3,588 last year. For the week, 10,000 bales, against 10,361 last week and 29,523 last year. Receipts at New Orleans today, 50 bales, against 866 last year, and at Houston 1,025 bales, against 626 last year.

HUNGER AND FEAR OF FOOD

Hungry, consequently enfeebled, unless that hunger is appeased. This is the result of a dyspeptic condition where hunger is preferred to the distress and misery that come after eating.

You will get hungry but you need have no fear from eating a hearty meal to satisfy that hunger if you use Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets. They make good digestion wait on appetite and health on both.

Mrs. M. A. Futch, 13 Wooster street, Wilmington, N. C., says:

"I am very much pleased with the results obtained since using your remedy and am happy to state that I am now all right, enjoying my usual good health. I was so weak and in such a run-down condition that it was with difficulty that I kept up and around. I could scarcely eat anything although I was ravenously hungry all the time. I got a bottle at Dr. Green's Drug store and after a good, thorough trial, for I went at them with a determination to get well, I find them to be as represented. One splendid thing in their favor is, that you experience no bad after effects from them."

Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets, 50 cents per bottle.

Dr. Richards' Laxocomfits, 25 cents per bottle.

TERRIBLE CRASH ON MICHIGAN ROAD

Thirty Excursionists Dead and Seventy Injured on Their Way to Detroit.

THE SCENES INDESCRIBABLE

Freight and Passenger Trains Come Together With Fearful Impact on Steep Grade—Shop Employes Off for a Pleasure Jaunt.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Salem, Mich., July 20.—Thirty people are dead and more than seventy injuried, many of them seriously, as the result of a head on collision today between this village and Plymouth when a Pere Marquette excursion train, bound from Ionia to Detroit, crashed into a westbound freight in a cut located at a sharp curve of the Pere Marquette road about a mile east of Salem.

The passenger train of eleven cars, carrying the Perre Marquette shop employees, of Ionia, and their families to the Michigan metropolis for their annual excursion was running at high speed, probably fifty miles an hour down a steep grade. It struck the lighter locomotive of the freight train with such terrific force as to turn the freight engine completely around.

The wrecked locomotives this afternoon lay side by side both headed eastward. Only a few of the freight train cars were smashed and it was only a few hours work to remove all traces of them from the scene. But behind the two wrecked locomotives six cars of the passenger coaches remained on the track undamaged and were used to convey the dead and injured to Ionia; one coach was entirely undamaged with only its forward trucks off the rails.

These were the rear five cars. The two coaches next ahead of those were telescoped. The next car forward stood almost on end and after the wreck, its forward end resting on the road bed and the rear end high in the air upon the two telescoped coaches that had been following it.

Two coaches were thrown crosswise of the track, and lay suspended from bank to bank of the cut five or six feet above the rails. Of the baggage car not enough remained to show where it had been tossed. Portions of the baggage car and of the locomotive tenders and freight cars were piled in an indescribable mass of debris.

The twenty-three bodies taken from the wreck were shipped to Ionia and the injuried were placed on twotrains, one of which headed for Detroit and the other for Ionia. There were about 35 injured people on each train.

Later in the day the body of Ed. Corwan, the head brakeman of the passenger train, was taken out of the wreck.

Fireman Knowles died on the relief train en route to Detroit, bringing the list of dead to thirty, with a possibilty that more bodies might be found in the wreckage and that several of the injured may die.

Responsibility is placed squarely up to the crew of the freight train by officials of the road. Officials who arrived at the scene of the wreck soon after the accident, secured from the freight the orders under which it was running and which clearly showed the position of the passenger excursion train, and that the freight had encroached upon the other trains running time. The special train was due at Salem at 9:10 A. M. and at Plymouth at 9:20 A. M. It passed Salem on time. The time card of the special was telegraphed to the freight crew in the form of a train order and this order with the signatures of the freight train crew attached was recovered by the officials of the road. The freight crew left the scene early, but railroad officials said that they explained simply that they had forgotten. The collision occurred at 9:13 o'clock and the freight train should have reached Salem at 9:10 to be within their orders.

Charles Herman and Paul Hess of the killed in the wreck, were brothers. James Vizard was a well known minor league ball player who had played in the Central League and also at Omaha. Willard Stager had come to Ionia recently from Kansas City where his mother now lives. Edward Gallagher is the son of an ex-mayor of Ionia. Henry Reynolds was a Perre Marquette engineer bound for Detroit on the excursion train to take out his regular run. All the dead with a single exception were from Ionia and were railroad employes.

Deroit, Mich., July 20.— A statement explaining the cause of today's wreck at Salem, Mich., and placing the responsibility entirely on the crew of the freight train was given out tonight at the general office of the Pere Marquette railroad in this city. "It is reported," says the statement "that Conductor Hamilton of the local freight remarked to the operator at Plymouth on pulling out that he thought he could make Salem before the arrival of the special." The freight had 16 minutes time in which under the rules it should be on the side track at Salem, six and a half miles from Plymouth.

WM. J. BRYAN ON RAILROADS

Declares That Government Ownership is Not an Immediate Issue in This Country.

FOR EFFECTIVE REGULATION

Discusses Subject of Federal Control and State Legislation—Duty of the Democratic Party — Attitude of the Republicans.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Lincoln, Neb., July 20.—William J. Bryan today issued the following statement:

"Government ownership is not an immediate issue. A large majority of the people still hope for effective regulation. While they so hope they will not consider government ownership While many Democrats believe, and Mr. Bryan is one of them, that public ownership of railroads is the ultimate solution of the problem, still those who believe that the public will finally, in self defense, be driven to ownership, recognize that regulation must be tried under the most favorable circumstances before the masses will be ready to try a more radical remedy.

"Regulation cannot be sufficiently tried within the next year. There is no desire anywhere to make government ownership an issue in 1908. Mr. Bryan fully agrees with those who believe that it would be unwise to turn attention from regulation, on which the people are ready to act, to government ownership, on which the people are not ready to act. To inject the government ownership question into the next campaign would simply give representatives of the railroads a chance to dodge the issues of regulation and deceive the public.

"So far, the railroads have been successful in preventing effective Federal regulation and State regulation has as a rule been restrained by the United States courts. It is about twenty years since the Inter-State Commerce Commission was created. It required about ten years for the courts to find out that the powers conferred were insufficient, and then it took about ten years to procure an amendment. The railroads fought the amendment at every step and the President was finally forced to compromise with the railroad Republicans in the Senate in order to procure their support.

"Even that amendment, obtained with tremendous effort, falls short of what it should be. It aims to stop passes and rebates. The railroads profit pecuniarily by both the stoppage of rebates and the prohibition of passes, but extortionate rates still exist. State legislation for the reduction of rates has resulted in an agitation on the part of the railroads for legislation which will deprive the State of authority and centralize all rate legislation in Congress.

"The Democratic party must meet the issue presented, it must resist the encroachments on the authority of the States. It must insist upon the exercise of Federal power for the regulation of inter-State commerce, and it must insist upon the exercise of State authority for the exercise of all of the power vested in the State. This question has grown in importance during the past year, and its prominence will be increased if any attempt is made to impair State authority.

"The Republican authority is as impotent to regulate the railroads as it is to exterminate the trusts, and to reform the tariff.

"The Democratic party has in three National campaigns demanded effective railroad regulation, while the Republican National platforms have been silent on the subject. The President has partly adopted the Democratic view on this subject; but, so far, the Republican leaders have resolutely opposed it. The President is helping to educate the people up to the need of railroad regulation; but his party, under its present leadership, is powerless to accomplish this or any other important reform. If the Democratic party will clearly and unequivocally demand: (1) The ascertaining of the value of all the railroads; (2) the preventing of over-capitalization; and (3), the reduction of rates to a point where they will yield only a reasonable return on the real value of the roads, it will commend itself not only to Democrats, but to those Republicans who have been led to study the railroad question. The railroad situation presents a vital issue and the issue should be so stated that every one can understand the party's position."

Enraged Mob Attacked Korean Premier's Residence and Did Other Violence.

JAPANESE TROOPS THERE

Korean Army Seems Impotent to Cope With Situation—Safety of Residents at Ping Yang is Problematical—Guns on Square.

(By Cable to The Morning Star).

Tokio, July 20.—A dispatch from Seoul says that an enraged mob of 1,000 persons has attacked and burned the residence of the Korean premier, Yi Wang. The premier was absent at the time on a visit to the palace.

A proclamation was published at 5 o'clock this evening warning the people to remain in their houses. At dusk, machine guns were intrenched behind breastworks built in the streets approaching the palace in anticipation of a night attack. Militia are patrolling the suburbs.

Japanese troops are arriving here but they are too few in number to make any attempt to disarm Korean soldiers feasible and they are now confined to their barracks.

At the formal audience this afternoon Marquis Ito was the first to be received. He had a conversation with the former Emperor lasting ten minutes.

The new emperor is performing his duties in a purely perfunctory manner. He is said to show little strength of character and the outlook for his administration of public affairs is not promising.

Not only is the Korean army regarded as impotent to cope with the situation, but the numbers of Japanese troops are wholly inadequate. Arrangements have been made for reinforcing them from Shimonoseki. Hostilities are directed wholly against the Japanese. Other foreigners are safe. Much apprehension is felt for the safety of Japanese at interior places when the Korean masses learn as they will in a few days, of the momentous events that have occurred.

This afternoon the rioters surrounding the premier's residence were dispersed by the Japanese police with the assistance of the artillery. The premier sought refuge in the palace, the other ministers going to the Japanese residency general. The cracks of rifles continue to be heard and it is believed that a collision has occurred between Japanese police and Korean soldiers. If Japanese troops attack the Koreans the state of unrest will be aggravated.

Troops are patrolling the main streets of the city in the face of a mob imflamed by frenzy by students. The anger of the Korean masses appear now to be directed less against the Japanese than Korean ministers, all of whom they have vowed to kill. The situation appears to warrant the proclaiming of martial law, but Ito, desirous of avoiding interference except to protect foreigners and the throne, is exceedingly reluctant to resort to military rule. The environs of the American and British consulates are guarded on account of their proximity to the palace.

Ping Yang, July 20.—All the shops here are closed. There is great excitement among the natives who are unaware that abdiction has been accomplished. The safety of Japanese residents is problematical as the departure of a regiment for Seoul leaves only 800 Japanese troops in the province.

The shops of Seoul have been closed now for thirty-six hours. Today the crowds are greater and the native spirit is higher, necessitating a greater show of military force as the people are encouraged and inflamed by the several killings of yesterday. General Hasegewa has two machine guns placed in the palace square.

It is of course impossible to verify these reports, but they are being freely circulated in circles whose channels of information undoubtedly are good.
